crate the same holy day by sports and games of the exception of four, who are disabled by various kinds. We would suggest to these philanthropists that there is a great opportunity for them at the Dusseldorf Gallery, where a painting of unmistakably immoral tendencies is now on exhibition. It is the more dangerous, in a moral point of view, from the fact that it is exhibited in a gallery which is frequented by people who would shrink from a profane exhibition of any sort. And the fact is, that notwithstanding the artistic merit of the work, its tendency is the same as that of the books and pictures which were seized in Frankfort street some time since, and the proprietor indicted by the Grand Jury as the vender of obscene prints and publications The revenue officers have seized foreign pictures not so dangerous as this work of Mr Page's. We hope the leaders of the moral and religious sentiment of the me tropolis will not lose this epportunity of distinguishing themselves, and giving a notable proof that the charge of strain ing at a gnat and swallowing a camel, which is so often laid at their doors, is without foundation in fact.

OPERATIC ARTISTS IN THE UNITED STATES-THE TRUE COURSE WHICH THEY SHOULD PUR BUE .- It is very often the case that distinguished artists who visit the United States with the highest expectations return disappointed, disgusted and soured, because their golden dreams have not been fully realized. A prima donna of first rate European reputation come to America under engagement at a high salary, to a manager who may not have money enough, after paying the advance salary, to buy himself a dinner. If his season is a good one he pays; if not the artist is a sufferer, and straightway visits the sins of the director upon the heads of the public. Under the old system singers came here expecting a great fortune at once, and that without leaving the metropolis. The new system which Ullman and Strakosch have inaugurated introduces to the public singers who have yet to make their reputa tions, and who, consequently, can be obtained at lower rates than the artist of assumed dis tinction. If this new order of things works well for the manager, it will give the coup de grace to the old fashion of one good artist at high salary and the rest of no account. But it by no means closes the country against Euro pean celebrities, nor does it prevent them from gaining more money here in a year than they would receive at home in five.

A case in point is that of Madame Grisi, who sang in grand Opera in the principal American cities, and comparatively failed. But every theatre goer in the country desired to see Gris once, and had she made a provincial tour its money success would have been enormous. And so with Piccolomini. Her concerts, so fa as she went, were unequalled in profits by any except Jenny Lind's; but Piccolomini wen back in the height of her popularity, and actually threw away as much as a hundred thousand dollars which she might have made in this country. Another instance of the same kind is found in the career of Madame Gazza niga in the United States. She has a fine renutation throughout the country, but intends to go back to Europe because the engagemen which she made with the manager of the Opers In New York has been broken, and her place supplied by some artists who can be had for less money. Instead of profiting by the experience of her illustrious predecessors, Madam Gazzaniga has sold her equipage at auction, and intends returning to Europe. She has fairly and honestly earned a fine reputation through out the country. Like Grisi and Piccolomini. her success in New York was a grand advertisement, which is worth any amount of money to her, and she should make a concert tour through the Union with an experienced manager-one that would neither steal nor waste the receipts in frivolous expenses; for the true science of making money in concert or Opera business, as well as any other, is to gave it. In the South and West, on the Pa coast, and in the West Indies, a distinguished artist like Madame Gazzaniga would be hailed with enthusiasm, and in a year or two might secure a comfortable independence. The trouble with all the fine artists who come here is that they do not understand the country, and always fall into the hands of people who carefully conceal the real facts from them Thus the artist and the public suffer equally, and no one is benefitted except some small scamp of an agent. Every year the country is growing better and better for artists. An in stance in point is the city of Chicago, which was not in existence in Malibran's day, and hardly thought of in an artistic point of view when Lind, Sontag and Grisi came, but is now one of the most important operatic places in the country-much more valuable than Boston or Philadelphia. St. Louis and New Orleans stand still higher, and other places in propor tion. All these cities will pay an artist like Gazzaniga much more than she can obtain in a regular European engagement; and therefore as well as for the artistic cultivation of our people, singers of her grade should not cross the sea until they have thoroughly explored his country.

THE MARINE CORPS.-Strong efforts will be made during the next session of Congress for an increase of the marine corps. An aug mentation has long been needed. The recent addition of ships to the naval complement has rendered it impossible, with the present strength, to supply them with the proper quantity of either men or officers. There should be In the force at least three thousand privates and such a proportion of officers as would be furnished for a similar number of men in the armv.

The corps now consists of one colonel com mandant, one lieutenant colonel, four majors thirteen captains, twenty first lieutenants and twenty second lieutenants, and about one thousand eight hundred non-commissioned officers musicians and privates. The officers are dis buted as follows, viz:-The colonel com ands the whole; the lieutenant colonel and o majors are in command of shore stations; o majors are on furlough, incapacitated for ther service. Of the thirteen captains, eight are at sea; two have lately returned from a cruise and are now on shore duty, as are also the remaining three. Of the twenty first lieu. tenants, twelve are at sea, two are on sick leave. and six are on shore duty—the latter, with one exception, have recently returned from sea. Of the twenty second lieutenants, fifteen are nt sea and five are on shore duty; the latter have recently returned from a cruise. Thus it disease or age.

These are p'ain facts, and should commend themselves to the consideration of every Congressman. Of late years the army and navy ave received much attention from Congress West Point has reached the highest point of perfection, and annually sends to the army a class of young officers of the very first order of military education. Annapolis has attained an enviable position among national schools of its class, and is furnishing the navy with midshipmen far superior to those of the olden time. It is now but just that Congress should do something for the improvement of the marine corps. It is as old and older than the century; yet the only change that has been effected in it since its organization has been the substitution of the percussion for the flint lock, and more recently the exchange of the smooth bore for the rifle musket. It would be a great saving of money to the government, and would greatly advance the efficiency of the corps, if its administration were transferred to the Department of War.

The Secretary of the Navy has as much as he can do to look after his ships. He can, during his term of office, only acquire naval ideas, and in becoming a sailor he naturally ignores the soldier. The corps should be divided into regiments, and attached to the infantry estabshment of the army. The infantry regiments could then alternately supply guards for the hips and garrisons for the different naval stations. The vacancies among the officers might be filled from the Military Academy, and not taken, as at present, from civil life, without regard to moral, physical or intellectual capacity.

MR. DICKINSON ON THE WISE-DONNELLY LET TER .- In another page we copy from the Richmond Enquirer a very curious correspondence between the Hon. D. S. Dickinson, of New York, and Mr. Thomas Fitnam, of Washington. on the subject of the private letter from Governor Wise to Bernard Donnelly. Mr. Fitnam writes to Mr. Dickinson to the effect that he had learned from a friend that a common rumor prevailed in Richmond to the effect that Dickinson was "an enemy of Governor Wise, and had been denouncing him for his Donnelly letter." Mr. Fitnam did not believe the story, but thought it due to Mr. Dickinson to give him an opportunity of contradicting it. The Sage of Binghamton replies in a characteristic letter, in which he piously drags in "the Day of Judgment" to his aid, and brands the statement as an idle and malicious falsehood. On the contrary, he is a great admirer of Governor Wise, and regards the publication of the Donnelly letter as "an outrage," though he did not attach much importance to it at the time.

We are glad to see that Mr. Dickinson has a right appreciation of the dishonorable act of publishing the private and confidential letter of Governor Wise, and that he calls things by their true names when he designates it as ar outrage. It was an outrage, and Confidence Cas sidy, who set copies of it affoat for the purpose of having them published, gets gratuitously the full benefit of Mr. Dickinson's opinion of his conduct. Entertaining such sentiments, is it not strange that, instead of taking the opportunity at the Syracuse Convention of denouncing the outrage, and wiping his skirts clean of the dirt of the transaction which adhered to them, he fraternized with the perpetrators of the outrage, and thus became an accessory after the fact, if he was not before? He denies that he denounced Governor Wise, but he does not deny that he did not denounce Confidence Cassidy. Hitherto Mr. Dickinson has reaped the advantages to himself of the outrage, and only now calls it an outrage when he finds the outhors of it have sold him as cheaply as they sold Wise's letter, for thirty pieces of silver.

There is one point Mr. Dickinson does not clear up, and that is the name of the party who sent him a copy. The Richmond Enquirer very properly remarks that he fails in his duty to the public in keeping the name back. Let him come out, even at the eleventh hour, and tell the whole truth.

As to the publication, Mr. Dickinson himself is not altogether free from the taint of suspicion. He says he sent the copy he received to "discreet friends." So he published the letter to them, trusting to their discretion to publish it only to other discreet friends, some one of whom might think it a matter entirely within his discretion to publish it fully in the newspapers.

But then Mr. Dickinson "attached little consequence" to the letter. It was of little consequence to him, unless so far as it served to lessen the chances of a rival and increase his own for the Presidency. But it was of very great consequence to Governor Wise, for it was made the instrument of his political assassination, by which he was stabbed in the back, and afterwards, when he was supposed to be dying, and harmless from his mortal wound, was stabbed again several times in the stomach by Confidence Cassidy, in order to make assurance doubly sure.

Mr. Dickinson would have played a more honorable part if he had denounced the "outrage" of Cassidy and Company in the beginning, and refused to take any advantage of it to build up his own interest for the Charleston Convention. He ought to have sent to Mr. Wise the copy of the letter enclosed to him by the Regency clique. Will he do so even now? It is better that he should do so late than never. But if he will not, he may find it very hard to clear himself of complicity in the Confidence outrage, and that to an extent beyond what his friends are willing to believe. But whatever he may do or not do in the future, he will learn that it were far better for his political prospects if he had kept entirely free from contact with the lepers of the Regency.

THE SOUTH SEVENTH STREET SEWER.—For some days past Messrs. B. & P. M'Cafferty have been engaged, under direction of the Sewer Commissioners, in building a sewer in South Seventh street, E. D. The excavation for the sewer is made under the railroad track, and a few days since the contractors notified the railroad compan that they must stop the cars, as they (the contractors could not afford to support the track so that the car could not afford to support the track so that the cars could run over. To this the railroad company paid no attention beyond preparing a complaint on which to procure an injunction when their cars should be stopped. Vesterday morning the contractors refused to permit the cars to pass, and in this way eleven were stopped. In about two hours the company had procured an injunction from Judge Morris restraining the contractors from proceeding with the sewer. The work was immediately stopped, and the cars were run again. The injunction will be argued as specially as possible, in order that the rights of the company may be STRAIGHT AMERICAN NOMINATION.—The Americans of the

The Venus of the Dusseldorf Gallery. quite large. For a long time past the rush of virtuoses at this arcadian retreat has never been so great. The atraction was, of course, the painting now on exhibition— Page's Venus—already fully described in the Haraldo. It is remarkable that an unusual number of ladies were present yesterday, although the visitations of this gallery have not been always remarkable for its feminine clement. They were there, and they seems to delight in the classic vicinity of the beautiful production, and were not over anxious to move to any other par of the building. Such glances were cast upon Venus The first and great object of attention was this work of art.

A great many persons, of course, pretended that they did not care a siver for the great piece, but after hurriedly inspecting every other painting in the room, their footsteps would slowly approach the beautiful Yeuus. The ladies never staid so long in this gallery as they did yesterday—as we have heard—and the manager of the hall timaelf very joilly confessed that the prospects of his establishment had greatly increased.

Up to four o'clock yesterday afternoon there was a rush of visiters to the gallery, and after that hour they began to low in like the tides of the sea. Venus is, beyond doub, the great attraction of the day, and it is to be supposed that the number of her visiters will rapidly increase. Who will say after this that New York is dedicient in taste for the line arts?

The Stabbing Affray in the Sixth Ward. Coroner Jackman yesterday held an ante mortem ex-amination at the City Hospital in the case of Dennis McHeny, who, it is alleged, was stabled on Monday eve ning by John Krimans, keeper of a groggery at No. 23
Fell street. A jury having been summoned, the injured man, who is seriously wounded in the head, neck and abdomen, testified as follows:—

man, who is seriously wounded in the head, neck and abdomen, testified as follows:—

Dennis McHeny, tailor, residing in avenue A, between Saxteenth and Seventeenth streets, deposed.—Last night, about eight or nine o'clock, I went to John Kiernau's house, 25 Petl'street; I met four or five fellows on the side walk and treated them to ale; the prisoner and his wife were out, and a little girl attended the bar; I paid the little girl for the drinks with a two shilling piece, and she returned me the change; the prisoner then came in and went into the back room and talked to the little girl; he came out with a gun and charged bayonet, ordered me out and hunted me out of the house; I siad I'll go, but I inquired of the prisoner how much I owed him; he then uncharged the bayonet, and hunted me out of the house and stabbed me; I went to get away from him, and in doing so I felt; the prisoner then stabbed me sever d times with the bayonet; I was taken to No. 6 Bowery, and from thence to this hospital; the prisoner was an old friend of mine; when the prisoner came after me with the bayonet, I picked up a bench and threw it at him for the purpose of protecting myself.

Johannh McCarty, the Bitle barmaid, was next called and swom.—Last night McHeny and five other men came in and called for something to drink; I gave it to them, and McHeny pold far the lauor; the prisoner came in before the men left, and ordered McHenry out; he took hold of his arm and put him out, and McHeny threw several bricks in through the window; one of the bricks came near striking a child I held in my arms; McHeny called the prisoner out to fight, but Krimans told him to go home to his wife and children; Krimans then went out, and they had a fight; I saw the prisoner have a gun in his hands while he was in the bedroom; I did not see the prisoner take the bayonet from the gun.

Henry A. Ray and Patrick Jennings were likewise sworn, but their restimony did not bring to light any additional facts. The case was then submitted to the jury, who rendered t

On this verdict the prisoner was committed to the Tombs in default of $2,000 bail.

ILLIE'S

To combine perfect fire proof qualities with a reliable protection from burglars, has long been the great desideratum of Safe manufacturers. But all attempts of this kind, by using any arrangement of sheet or boiler iron, have proved utter failures, and no protection against the attack of skiftil burglars, as the daily reports in our papers will testify. Nine-tenths of the Safes in use in this country are entirely worthless, so far as their burglar proof qualities are concerned.

By a scientific combination of chilled and wrought iron, LILLIE'S SAFE is made impenetrable to the drill, while the COMBINATION LOCK, WITHOUT KEY HOLE, prevents the introduction of powder, and renders the picking prevents the introduction of powder, and renders the picking prevents the introduction of powder, and renders the picking prevents the introduction of powder, and renders the picking prevents the introduction of powder, and renders the picking prevents the introduction of powder. The fire proof qualities prevents the introduction of powder, and renders the pick of the lock an absolute impossibility. The fire proof qualit of these Safes are unsurpassed, as has been proved by thorou-tests and numerous accidental fires. issis and numerous accidental lives.
